

Leslie and Scott Harris, South Plains Astronomy Club members, set up a telescope in the Ransom Canyon meadow Saturday during a stargazing event. (Slatonite photo/Ron Cox)

Astronomy Club hosts stargazing party

Ransom Canyon Residents had a special treat last Saturday night (July 27).

The South Plains Astronomy Club set up powerful telescopes in the meadow at sunset.

Later, viewers were able to clearly see Saturn's rings, Jupiter and several of its moons, and an exploded nebula.

Working with the Ransom Canyon Property Owner's Association, the Club plans to make this a monthly event.

For more information, visit the Club's webpage at cat-star.org.